NeuroSleep — Partnership Opportunity

Ways to work together, stated honestly.

I snore, and I've dealt with enough bad sleep — mine and other people's — to want to build something better than a passive pillow. I'm not a hardware engineer. This document reflects a concept I developed using AI tools: product direction, system design thinking, and market positioning. It is not a finished company, and I won't pretend it is.

Why Consider This

- A real, growing market (~$34.7B in 2026, ~18% CAGR to 2031 — Mordor Intelligence) with proven consumer willingness to pay for smart sleep hardware.
- A clear product gap: most competitors do only tracking or only adjustment, rarely both in one closed-loop device.
- A founder who has done the non-technical groundwork — product concept, positioning, market thinking — and is personally motivated, not chasing a trend.

Ways to Work Together

Technical Co-Founder — Join as a partner to build and own the technical side. Equity-based; terms discussed once there's mutual fit.

Hardware / Industrial Design Partner — Contract or collaborative arrangement to design and build a first working prototype.

Manufacturing Collaboration — Small-batch or contract manufacturer interested in co-developing a product line, not just filling an order.

Licensing (later stage) — Once a working prototype exists, licensing the concept and brand becomes realistic — not before.

What a Partner Gets — Honestly

- A worked-out product concept, system design direction, brand identity, and market positioning.
- A founder available full-time, with no messy cap table or prior investors to manage.
- No inherited baggage — but also no existing IP, no finished design, and no proven demand yet.

Anyone promising a de-risked, "proven," no-development-risk opportunity at this stage is overselling. This isn't that, and it's presented honestly as a concept-stage collaboration, not a finished asset.
